Job Description:

This is an excellent opportunity for a Graduate Economist who is motivated and ready to take on a challenge. You will be working with the Company's Directors and Senior Economists in the development of comprehensive short and long term forecasts to support the Companies energy demand forecasting models. This process is computer and statistics intensive, with several automated tools to help with model production. You must also be comfortable with econometric modelling techniques and assessing new sources of economic data.

With a strong background in microeconomics, econometrics, and their application, the successful candidate will quickly develop a good understanding of the trends and discontinuities in energy demand across global markets. In the role you will be required to understand UNIX and the Windows command line interface for interaction with the software product.

As an economist you will play an important role in helping ensure consistency and alignment in the update of macroeconomic models through regular dialogue and close collaboration with colleagues across the business and the clients that the Company supports. This will act to reinforce the Companies strong position as a leading provider of forecasting solutions to the energy industry worldwide.

You will be office-based mainly in Waterloo, London, but the position may include opportunities to work in the US office with similar types of models. It may also include opportunities to accompany senior staff to meetings with clients at their places of business.

Essential requirements:

- Fluent English, written and spoken
- Eligible to work in the UK
- Good understanding of statistical theory and/or economics
- An understanding of statistical/econometrics analysis computer software
- Good PC skills in a Microsoft Windows operating environment
- Strong communication skills; able to communicate complex economic concepts to non economists (both internal and external)
- The ability to work as part of a team involving multiple locations and time zones
- Motivated work ethic with good analytical and decisions making skills
- Ability to meet tight deadlines

Desirable attributes:

- Fluent in another language would be an advantage
- Familiarity with UNIX computer environment and the command line interface
- Familiarity with database management such as MySQL and MS SQLServer
- Previous demand modelling experience within the Energy industry

Company Activity:

- The company provides highly accurate load forecasting solutions to the electric and gas industries in both the US and Europe with the potential to expand worldwide.
- As a small and highly specialised organisation, who places a great emphasis on retaining and developing their staff.

Location:

- Based mainly in their London office, but with opportunity to travel to their US offices.
- The London office is a 15-20 minute walk from central London attractions such as Westminster, the South Bank and the West End theatre district.

Remuneration details:

- Salary between £18,000 and £22,000 dependant on experience.
